Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, the wedding service was read for Miss Jean Rowley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Rowley of Homer, and Rev. Harold Finley son of Mrs. Harry Finley of McConnelville, Ohio in the Homer Congregational church by Rev. Alderton of Chicago.

The candlelight altar was adorned with small palms and baskets of white gladioli. Mr. Rowley gave his daughter in marriage. The bride wore a floor length gown of white silk chiffon and a halo of small white blossoms held her finger tip veil in place. She carried a bouquet of white gladioli and stephanotis and wore a string of pearls, a gift from the groom.

Miss Helen Sandstrom was the maid of honor and wore a gown of green chiffon and carried a bouquet of white gladioli and yellow daisies.

Lt. Owen Rowley served as best man and the guests were ushered by Bruce Anderson, Willard Rowley Jr. Edd Hefter and Martin Dargen the latter two from Chicago. Preceding the service, Mrs. Raymond Carlson, wearing a gown of aqua marisette lighted the tapers.

The happy couple departed that evening for Michigan where they will enjoy a week's honeymoon, before Mr. Finley has to commence his school duties at the Chicago Theological Seminary.

Rev. and Mrs. Finley will make their home in Chicago.

MUST CUT OUT WEEKLY INDIVIDUAL BOWLING SCORES

Because of the shortage of paper and the need to conserve it, and because of wanting to run each serviceman's letter, we find that we must omit the weekly individual scores of the bowlers but we will try to run the totals and game summaries. To those who are assigned the duty of sending in this paper that information: if we have not pleased you with the way we handled the bowling news this week perhaps you can arrange another way, which will be short, and conserve space.

Authoress Speaks at Tinley Woman's Club Meeting

The day which had been looked forward to for many months by the members of the Tinley Park Woman's Club was Wednesday, September 22 when they would have their opening meeting of the 1943-1944 club season. And it was an ideal day, weather co-operated in giving a lovely fall day. All the members and visitors were happy which contributed to the success of the affair which was held in the Village hall. The latter was decorated with many baskets of fall garden flowers.

It was President's day and Mrs. Brown Campbell, presided most graciously and her few words of welcome were felt to be sincere.

Dr. R. J. L. McKelvey, pastor of the Tinley Park Methodist church led in a short devotional and prayer. Following this Mrs. Campbell introduced her officers and chairmen who with the members will work with her through this year. Also introduced were those present from several neighboring Woman's Clubs, and Tinley Park club gave them a glad welcome as well as the two new members, Mrs. Hugo Neithammer and Mrs. Gerald Dunn of Mokena.

The speaker of the afternoon, Bernadine Bailey, of Chicago, newly re-elected president of the Illinois Women's Press Association, was introduced by the Press and Publicity chairman, Mrs. Wm. Semmler, who in her remarks mentioned a few of the twenty one books which Mrs. Bailey had written, among which were: "Little Greta of Denmark, Little Lauri of Finland, Cave, Castle and Cottage; also many articles such as "I Became a Girl Cabby" published in March 1943. "Coronet," "The First Year, A. D." published in June SHE Mrs. Bailey is publicity writer for the National Parent Teacher Association for this year and it was a real joy to have such a busy and pleasant person address the group.

Mrs. Bailey answered questions which she said were most frequently asked of her: How she came to write a certain book, where she got her material, how she decided on the name of the book, etc. In writing, "Abe Lincoln's Other Mother," a story of Sarah Bush Lincoln which by the way is the first book ever written about Abraham Lincoln's step mother, she was given a contract by the publisher to write this book of 90,000 words in three months. It required a great deal of research work; but Mrs. Bailey having lived her childhood in Mattoon, Ill. and who as a child often of the Abraham Lincoln homes and places where he had lived, was familiar with much of this historical data.

Mrs. Bailey's latest book, "The Youngest WAAC" was a book which had to receive the OK from the commanding officers at Fort Des Moines, the WAC training station and also from the correct officials in Washington, D. C. before it could be published. Thereby the readers will know that the information contained therein, is correct.

The hostesses of the afternoon were the Club officers, and they invited all guests to a daintily appointed tea table where Mrs. W. B. Combs, and Mrs. Chas. Nielsen, founder and first president of the club poured.

The largest attendance seen at a meeting of the Mokena Civic Association for quite some time was present Tuesday evening when the first meeting of the new year of the association was held at Hatch hall with the new President, Robt. J. Schlacks in the chair.

The chief problem under consideration was the sponsoring of bingo parties by the Association to raise funds which have been reduced by, not being able to hold the annual fall festival due to war time conditions. The question under debate was whether the Association should hold these parties once a week or twice a month and finally it was decided to hold them bi-monthly. The first of the series of parties will be held Saturday night in the Mokena school auditorium and all the proceeds will go to the Mokena Women's Service Club for the Xmas box fund, but all proceeds from future parties will be used to assist other organizations and for civic projects and purposes.

Alfred Hatch had conducted a one man drive to increase the membership and did exceptionally well and was given a hearty round of applause. About fifty members and guests were present and out of this group 16 new members enrolled with James Fassett, the Association's secretary. At the close of the meeting cards were played. Dear Friends:-

Well I guess it is due time that I sit down and write you a few lines. I have been getting the Times every week and it sure is swell to be able to sit down and read about all the folks back home.

For the past three weeks I have been in the hospital but I am leaving to-morrow to go back to school. I am down here in Florida to go to Guard School which is just like M. P. school and it is plenty tough. We are living in hotels, so that isn't so bad compared to what some of the fellows are living in.

Well folks, that is just about all I have to say for this time. Hope to see good old Tinley again soon and to all of my Buddies wherever they might be.

Good Luck fellows! As Ever

ALLIED CO-OPERATION BETTER

Officials who have attended all the big strategy powwows—Washington, Casablanca, Washington again, and Quebec—declare that there is progressively better Allied co-operation, and a gradual disappearance of the friction which beset earlier conferences.

In the dark days just after Pearl Harbor, the British were plugging for an all-out war against Hitler, while the U. S. officers, outraged over Pearl Harbor, were out to scalp the Japs.

The decision to swing our weight with the British was made only after President Roosevelt had exercised his authority as commander-in-chief and overruled ambitious U. S. plans for the Pacific.

After that decision, there came disagreement about where to strike in the European theater. U. S. army staff officers argued in favor of a cross-channel operation, but Churchill and the British staff shrank from spilling blood against the steel-and-concrete shoreline of France and the Low Countries.

Instead, Churchill wanted the U. S. army sent to North Africa, to aid in the reconquest of the Mediterranean. Again, Roosevelt supported Churchill against his own military chiefs, but not until after strong debate in the inner councils.

Another issue was the question of aid to Russia and Britain, which U. S. army and navy officers wanted to cut down from the Roosevelt-Hopkins-Churchill estimates. The Russian cause was upheld against all comers by Harry Hopkins, and Maj. Gen. James H. Burns, executive of the munitions assignment board. Burns' favorite remark is, "Those Russians are killing more Germans than anybody else, and they ought to have the equipment to keep up the good work."

The major decisions that have come from all the controversies have now borne favorable fruit. The Mediterranean is cleared. U. S. forces have been tested under fire, landing operations have had full dress rehearsals for the bigger job of crossing the channel, and the Russians are "keeping up the good work."

So when the British and Americans get together now, there is much more warmth than at one time. There still are some friendly differences as there must be when strong men sit down together, and it is reported that U. S. military leaders still chafe at lack of action across the channel. But on the whole, success is making the road easier.

MILK SHORTAGE

Most serious food problem facing the civilian population at the moment is the threatened shortage of milk.

White House farm advisers warn that we will have a very real and acute milk famine on our hands unless the War Food Administration and the Office of Price Administration act quickly to adjust the price of feed grain for dairy cattle.

Due to higher feed costs, dairy farmers, especially in the East, are unable to sell their milk under OPA price ceilings and stay in business. Dairy farmers in Pennsylvania and other Eastern states, hard hit by the drought, have been losing as much as $35 per cow because of lack of pasture. As winter draws on, the pasture problem, plus higher feed costs, will vitally affect milk production all over the country.

So far the War Food administration, under its new chief, Marvin Jones, has done nothing to meet this pressing problem. But unless he does the President will be urged to take matters in his own hands and arrange for feed price subsidies through legislative action. Failing that, he can, by an executive order, provide feed funds from the Commodity Credit corporation.

SOLDIERS SEE THE U. S. A.

The war department has supplied figures showing the amazing distance which the average soldier travels in the course of training.

From the time of his induction to embarkation, each soldier is transferred six to eight times, for an average distance of 850 miles each time. This makes a total equal to two complete trips across the continent.

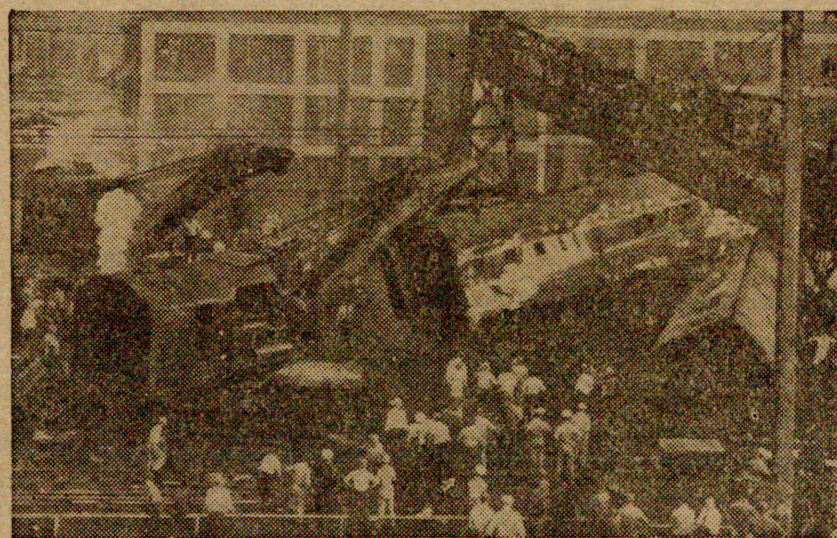

In World War I, there was far less troop movement. The average number of transfers was only three.

ABIDING VALUES FROM
ISRAEL'S HISTORY

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 11:13-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.—Proverbs 14:34.

What makes a nation great? God's dealings with Israel answer that question. The history which we have briefly touched upon in our study of the first four books of the Bible is reviewed in Deuteronomy.

Moses, realizing that the end was at hand for him and that a new generation was about to go into the promised land, reviewed the history of the people, restated their laws, and renewed the appeal of God for their loyal obedience. This record is found in the Book of Deuteronomy, from which our lesson is taken.

We find here that the nation which is truly great—

I. Worships the True God (vv. 13-15).

There is a fundamental factor which must underlie all real national greatness—love of God. This has an inseparable corollary—serving Him "with all your heart, and all your soul."

Says the wise man of Proverbs (14:34), "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." We have well-nigh forgotten that fact. We need to be reminded of it again in God's word to Israel.

What is the result? The blessing of God upon the land, the giving of abundant harvest, in fact, the open-handed generosity of God.

II. Heeds God's Warning (vv. 16, 17).

This is the negative side. God dealt with Israel through promises if they were faithful, and the threat of judgment if they forgot Him.

One is as important as the other in the leading of a nation—and in the rearing of children. We, like our heavenly Father, should faithfully keep every promise; but we should just as surely fulfill every warning of coming judgment.

America has seen the handwriting of God in warning concerning its waywardness and sin. Will it heed and avoid further judgment?

III. Honors God's Word (vv. 18, 19).

Loving God and His Word is not a matter for theological speculation or for sanctimonious discussion in some dark cloister. Thank God the Christian faith is at its best in the ordinary affairs of life. It finds its proper place in the tender relationship of parent and child. Its teachings are pure, delightful, simple and entirely appropriate to any occasion, whether one sits or rises, walks or lies down. God's words are the words to be laid up in the heart and in the soul, to be taught to our children, to be the constant and normal subject of conversation.

IV. Testifies for God (vv. 20, 21).

Here again we have the home before us. And it is, of course, the home which makes the nation. If the home speaks for God, the nation will do so, inevitably and effectively.

We may not, as did the pious Jew, fasten a little container bearing God's Word on our doorstep, but we may make the home itself and the life of its inhabitants an effective testimony for God before our neighbors.

It is obvious that the home either speaks for or against God. A profession of faith in Him, an outward reputation for adherence to religious principles which does not vitally touch our dealings with one another and with the community in which we live—these clearly testify not for God but against Him. On the other hand, who can estimate the value of a sweet and orderly Christian home? Whether it be on a dusty city street, or on a quiet country lane, it is a light that cannot be hid.

V. Counts on God for Victory (vv. 22-25).

God promised that if Israel diligently kept His commandments, loved Him and walked in His ways, they would be a nation that would overcome and dispossess their enemies, and prosper in every good purpose.

God desires the nation which honors His name to stand before the other nations of the earth victorious and prosperous.

The purpose of the Lord for Israel was a far greater one than they ever achieved, because they fell into sin and drew back in unbelief. The limits of the land which He proposed to give them, as stated in verse 24, far exceed that which they did possess in Palestine.

God's plans are large plans. His promises to us, like those to Israel, are stupendous. We need to learn to take Him at His word.

"No man shall be able to stand before you" (v. 25) was the promise to Israel. "Ask what ye will" (John 15:7) is the promise to us. They failed because they did not believe God. Will we fail for the same reason?

"NO MORE 'DOSING'
FOR ME!"

Says happy ALL-BRAN eater!

If you've been "dosing" without getting the lasting relief you wanted, this letter may offer you real encouragement:

"Permit me to compliment you on your wonderful product, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN! It certainly lived up to its promises, with me! I'd been taking manufactured laxatives for a long time! But, no more dosing for me, thanks to KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN! I've adopted it as my standby!" Mr. Alexander Klein, 630 West 170th Street, N. Y. C.

Yes, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN really "gets at" one big cause of constipation—lack of sufficient "cellulosic" elements in the diet—because ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements! They work by helping the friendly colonic flora fluff up and lighten the colonic wastes for easy elimination. Not a harsh purgative! Doesn't "sweep you out"! ALL-BRAN is simply a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If this is your trouble eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you don't find you can give up "dosing" for good! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

DOAN'S PILLS

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin, given an opportunity to choose any yearling on his family's Wyoming ranch, picks the filly of a "loco" mare. Flicka, the filly, is badly hurt trying to jump the corral fence. She grows steadily worse, and Captain McLaughlin orders Gus, the foreman, to shoot her. Ken persuades Gus to wait, and when the others are asleep he goes out to the pasture, where he finds Flicka trapped in a stream. He rescues her, but when Gus finds them in the morning, Ken is unconscious and dangerously ill. Finally won over, Captain McLaughlin risks his life to save Flicka from a wildcat. Flicka and Ken both get well.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XIX

Gus entered the room holding the Winchester in one hand and one long shell in the other.

"Dere's only one shell, Boss."

"Where are the others? There was a whole box of them."

"De officers shot 'em all off dat Sunday dey vas here."

Rob snatched the shell. "One's enough."

Gus said, "You'll find de filly in a sling on de far side de creek. Tim und I rigged it up for her ven we saw she still had life in her."

Rob got his flashlight from the shelf, and went out. Gus raised sorrowful eyes to Nell's white face. "Don't take it so hard, Missus," he said softly. "De Boss is right. No gude to let sick animals live."

Rob thrust the shell into the rifle. Holding the gun under his left arm, he used the flashlight with his right. He knew the way as well as he knew the way around his own room, but the light picked out his footing for him.

A blinding flash came, and another and another, illuminating the whole pasture, while the skies exploded with thunder. Before the darkness shut the scenes out, Rob had seen three things. He saw the filly in the sling on the far side of the creek, the rock-slide behind her. He saw, down at the end of the field, the cattle bunched together, on guard, frightened, staring. And he saw what they were staring at, something white lying on the ground near the three pines, with a huge mountain lion crouched over it.

Rob stood motionless in the darkness, thinking. He wondered if the mountain lion had seen him. The next flash of lightning answered him, for the lion had disappeared.

What was that white thing lying on the ground? Rob wanted to investigate, but he dared not move. Just one shell in the gun—

He stood still for a long time, all his senses strained, listening, trying to see through the darkness, the gun ready in his hands, cocked, half lifted.

The lightning flashes showed the cattle still bunched, watching, and the white thing on the ground with no moving creature near it. Then McLaughlin saw two blazing green eyes fastened upon him. He could not tell whether they were near or far until a flash of lightning showed him that they were in the center of a mass of shrubs. The lion had hidden himself in those shrubs and was looking out at him from there.

The eyes seemed quite steady. Rob raised his gun, took aim, and fired.

It seemed to him that just before he had pressed the trigger the eyes had disappeared. He lowered the gun and stood warily, listening and looking.

After a while, he strode boldly over to the bushes, shouting and brandishing his gun. With the aid of his flashlight he looked all through them and found, as he had expected, that he had missed. There was no sign of the lion.

"Well, we're in for it, Flicka," he said, stroking the filly's nose. "A night of it. You're a drowned rat and I'm another. I'd feel better if I had a pocket full of shells—and a drink—and a fire—and some dry clothes—"

He had barely reached this conclusion, when he saw a light approaching, swinging and bobbing down the path.

"Hey! Nell!"

"Rob! Are you all right? Where are you?"

"Here—on the far side of the brook." He swung the flashlight. Presently he saw her anxious face, lit from underneath by the light of the lantern in her hand. Under her other arm she carried the big Express rifle. She was in old khaki pants and a sweater.

"Good girl—" He went to help her cross the brook where there were some stones, and took the heavy gun and lantern from her.

"What happened? I heard a shot—was that Flicka?"

"No. The mountain lion."

"I wish he'd show himself this minute," said Nell, "and get himself shot. What do you think he'll do?"

"We may never see him again. He's been shot at once, he sees me here, he may make for the woods."

"Well—if he doesn't—here is Flicka—"

"Yes. Well, I'm spending the night with Flicka. I can't get her up to the stables. She can't walk."

Rob took Howard to school on the opening date and talked to Mr. Gibson about Ken. He returned to Nell, astonished and moved at what the boy had done.

"Did you read it?" he asked Nell in a low voice as they sat by the window in Ken's room, "The Story of Gypsy?"

"No. We decided that it must be all his own. If I'd read it I'd have wanted to make suggestions, and as this was really an examination paper, it didn't seem right."

Rob handed her the paper. When he had first read it himself it had given him the strange emotion within his breast that his younger son sometimes caused.

She returned to Rob. "What did Gibson say about it?"

"Said it was a good piece of writing. Says Ken's got a brilliant mind—asked me if I knew it—"

"What did you say?"

"I said No, I thought he was dumb; and he said sometimes brilliant people were very dumb."

In Nell's worn and tired face the dimple of the right cheek suddenly showed. "I didn't know Gibson was smart enough to say a thing like that," she whispered.

"Rob! Are you all right? Where are you?"

"Did you know it, Nell—that Ken is brilliant?"

"I suspected it."

"What on earth made you think that? He's always failed at everything—till this summer."

"Well—" Nell spoke slowly, thoughtfully, "a dreamer—you know—it's a mind that looks over the edges of things—the way Ken can do what he calls 'getting into other worlds'; gets into a picture; gets into a drop of water; gets into a star—anything—"

Rob sat looking out the window.

"What did Mr. Gibson finally decide?" asked Nell.

"Said that as Ken had made a sincere effort, he would take him back into his own grade on probation."

Some days later, when there had been a light fall of snow, and the whole world was an etching in brown and white, Rob wrapped the boy up, and telling Nell that there was something out on one of the hills he wanted to show him, drove down the road and stopped the car. Looking out the window, they could see, a short distance away, where the range rolled up to the woods.

"Look," said McLaughlin, pointing out the window.

On the edge of the woods stood a great stag with a full-antlered head. Blending perfectly with the brown and white etching, he was hard to see at first. His whole body was in profile to the car, but his head was turned around to face them, held very high, the eyes in an unswerving direct gaze bent upon the car there in the road. The up-curving lines of his neck and head flowed into the trunks and then the branches of the many-pointed antlers in indescribable beauty.

Ken's mouth fell open as he looked. The stag was absolutely motionless. The word nobility might have been coined to embody all that the magnificent creature expressed. Or courage—

McLaughlin glanced down at his son. The mouth was still open.

"How did you know he'd be here, Dad?"

"I just saw him, driving in from the highway."

"Why does he stay so long without moving?"

"He's got a doe lying down there. He's protecting her. That's why he doesn't move."

The boy looked a long time yet, then glanced up at his father. "Because she's his responsibility?"

"Yes."

McLaughlin started the engine, turned the car and drove toward the ranch.

Ken watched the motionless stag as long as he could see him. The boy's eyes burned; there was a choking in his throat, and all through his body a feeling as of rushing torrents.

When he could no longer see the stag, his eyes roved over the hills and woods. He did not know what had ended the cold, weary detachment and united him to the world again, he only knew that it was his own once more, that it was beautiful and alive, that he wanted to see Flicka. And he pressed his face against his father's sleeve and wept.

Late that afternoon Ken, bundled up in a heavy sweater, slammed the house door, thudded across the Green and opened the gate. He found a new pasture; snow on the ground, bare trees, the orange glow of a real winter sunset in the sky. And Flicka—

Every day, for weeks, she had looked for him. She would stand at the corral gate with head up and ears pricked sharply; then, disappointed, whirl about with an impatient nicker and trot restlessly around the hill, then turn, point her ears, and stand listening again.

She had grown two inches in height and gave promise of being a big horse, with speed and power and fire. She had a thick, warm winter coat of long fur; there was no swelling on any of her legs. Cold mornings, she put her nose to the earth and kicked her heels in the air; or twisted her body and bucked; or galloped wildly from one end of the pasture to the other, her blonde mane and tail streaming. When snow fell, coming sometimes on a whining winter wind, she lifted her head high and sniffed at it with flaring nostrils.

Now the slamming of the ranch door caught her attention and she trotted questioning toward the corral.

Ken's quick feet thudded across the Green, the gate rattled; and when the boy came running down the path, crying, "Oh, Flicka! Flicka!", the neigh that rang out on the cold air was a sound the filly had never made before.

1944 Production Goal 5% Above This Year's

Farmers Must Plant 380 Million Acres

Record acreages of soybeans, dry beans and peanuts harvested in 1943 will be topped in 1944 if national requirements for these crops are met, according to War Food administration reports. Special emphasis will be placed on these foods, as well as on cereals, dry peas, potatoes, canning crops, and flax and feed crops in planning new seedings.

Farmers are expected to plant a total of 380 million acres, or 5 per cent more than in 1943, with largest increases on peanuts, dry peas and wheat. A national planting of 68 million acres has already been asked on wheat, 26 per cent more than in 1943.

Peanuts and dry peas will probably be up as much as 30 per cent, and increases for dry beans and soybeans may be 14 to 18 per cent.

A Connecticut farmer and his committeeman discuss production problems. These committeemen are farmers themselves, elected by their neighbors in each county. Their job is to work with the Agricultural Adjustment agency and other government agencies in giving advice and assistance to the nation's food producers. Committeemen can be helpful in obtaining priority ratings on machinery and building materials in getting loans, or in hiring farmhands.

or more, above the current harvested acreage, it is announced. Both types of potatoes, regular and sweet, will be stepped up with corn showing a small increase.

Hemp and flax, it is pointed out, although not food crops are of first importance to the war. Hemp for rope and flax for oilseed are in the front line of every battle.

Feed crops will receive emphasis because of increased needs for more livestock, and the importance of maintaining production of eggs and milk at the level of 1943, or raising output on both commodities. Considerably more beef and veal will be sought in 1944, but pork production is not expected to exceed 1943 by more than a few per cent. The development of the 1944 livestock program will depend in large measure on the feed yields from 1943 crops. Extension of pasture will be urged to relieve this feed shortage. All idle land should be planted to some cover crop such as alfalfa, clover, or some cereal grain. Rye and some varieties of wheat serve well as over-the-winter coverage. This policy also returns needed minerals to the soil.

Planted acreage should be expanded without plowing up land which should be kept in grass. Using idle crop land, out of production in recent years, and speeding up the cycle of crop rotation on farms where it is feasible are the answer, according to Marvin Jones, WFA administrator. He also pointed out that sound farming methods must be employed to insure high yields over a period of years, since food demands will continue to be heavy for a long period to come.

The War Food administration will continue its program of support prices to establish desirable price relationships, it is announced, making it easier to obtain adequate increases in most needed crops and generally to balance total production.

In determining crop emphasis, farmers even in the principal wheat states of the Great Plains have been asked to give priority to dry beans, potatoes, flax and grain sorghums in some areas. First call in the Pacific Northwest is also for dry peas, dry beans, canning crops and potatoes. Soybeans, corn, dry beans, potatoes, flax and canning crops will be emphasized in the Corn Belt and Lake states. Larger wheat acreages than this year will be needed in the Southern and Eastern states to supply local food and feed needs.

Boron—Deficient Soil

Revealed by Turnips

Boron, like nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, must be present in soil if plants are to grow satisfactorily, says Eldred Reeve, graduate fellow in soils and plant physiology at Rutgers university. Often a few cents worth of boron will make a field several times more productive. A good way to detect boron deficiency is through turnips and rutabagas. If they show dark brown blotches the soil is boron-deficient.

Tinley Park News

S. 2-C Herbert Matthews is home on a furlough with his parents and family. He is looking fine.

Miss Marion Moss has joined the Army Nurse Corp and will leave for Camp Grant October 1.

Once again, the group of Niagara Girls honored one of their club members, Mrs. Lois Klepper Steinmetz in the form of a linen shower which was held in the home of Mrs. Shirley Anderson. Mrs. Klepper with Miss Erma Becker co-hostess.

The theme of the evening was carried out in white treasure chests with a large one on the floor in which the honored guest's gifts were found, and a small duplicate chest as the table centerpiece.

This was filled with favors for the group. A canopy of pink and white crepe paper streamers was hung over the table and flowers rained down on the guests from cellophane ribbons.

Lois received many lovely gifts including guest towels, luncheon sets and turkish towels. After the gifts were opened, two guessing games were devised into. One was concerning a bride's needs in a kitchen and the other was names of some musical scores. Miss Helen Harper won first prize in both games.

Mrs. Helen Swisher and Miss Marion Moss won second.

Refreshments were, sandwiches, pickles, olives, cocoa and to top it off, a chocolate whipped cream cake with "Best Wishes to Lois from the Niagara Girls" written on it. Mrs. J. Klepper, the honored guest's mother, poured.

Mrs. Trudie Swisher, the sponsor of this girl's group, and all the girls were so delighted to see each other again, because the time between their last gathering and this one has been so long. The sight of so many familiar faces brought back many pleasant memories of yesterday.

there IS a serious waste paper shortage!

and you can make it your patriotic duty to help in this present emergency by saving waste paper right now.

Only one-third of all the waste paper in this country is collected and reclaimed. It is up to every American to help salvage more of it!

BECAUSE

Waste paper is salvaged and made into paper boxes, cartons and shipping cases needed to send endless supplies to our Armed Forces, and for essential civilian needs.

Life-saving blood plasma is carried overseas in paper containers. Emergency Food Rations move through steaming jungle, desert heat and frigid Arctic cold—in paper containers.

Vital Red Cross supplies—medicines, serums, bandages—are hurried to the four corners of the earth in paper containers.

Food for American prisoners of war is delivered in paper containers.

Waste paper is made into actual implements of war, such as bomb bands, practice bombs, wing tips, airplane signals, parachute flares, ammunition chests, shell protectors, shell containers.

Here on the Home Front, too, countless essential civilian and wartime items are moving night and day via train, truck and airplane in paper containers and cartons. Food . . . clothing . . . airplane parts . . . tools for busy war plants . . . are shipped in cases, boxes and containers made from the reclaimed waste paper which you can help salvage.

YOU SHOULD SAVE

Newspapers, magazines
Cardboard boxes, cartons and shipping cases
Paper bags, wrapping paper
Letters, envelopes and other advertising matter
Old record files
Contents of every wastebasket

Any kind of waste paper . . . even such items as discarded cigarette packages and used match books are reclaimable.

Remember, carloads of waste paper are needed right now.

Mills are partly idle for lack of it.

Save every scrap of waste paper!

by EVERETT MITCHELL

Farm Commentator, Heard Daily 6:15-6:45 am on WMAQ—670 on your dial

It's still too early to store your victory garden vegetables in the cellar for winter use—but it's by no means too early to get your storage space ready!

You'll be wise to store all the garden food you can this wartime winter. And you'll be doubly wise to store it so none will be lost through spoilage or freezing.

Now's the time to build a really good vegetable store room in your basement. If you have one, you may want to improve or enlarge it in anticipation of the many more root vegetables which will soon be ready for storage.

If you have a cool, well-ventilated basement under the house, you may be in the habit of accumulating vegetables there without actually turning part of it into a storeroom. This is unwise especially if there is a furnace, since the air is too warm and too dry for root crops.

You may overcome this by partitioning off a corner or an ell of your basement for a store room. Since root vegetables keep best in cool air—the cooler, the better so long as there is no danger of freezing—you may do well to insulate the walls of your room, both inside and out, thus keeping both furnace heat and the outside cold away from the vegetables.

Dear Mr. Semmler:

I am glad to hear from Mokena and glad to read the paper. And we moved to Camp Polk and surely a wonderful camp here. I think it is just like good old Camp Swift, Texas. Boy, surely plenty hot down here every day. I have met a lot of my home town boys and surely feels good to meet them all in one Camp like this. Well I am sending you my new address so you do not still send it to F. S. H. because takes too long for it to come back. And hoping to get an ice furlough soon to see all my old friends again around my home town. But am hoping to get home for good instead. Say we are having wonderful times here.

They have a big service club for soldiers to bring their folks in to visit with them, and have a wonderful big guest house too. There you can play ping pong and write letters and then we all get together and sing a lot of songs. And boy that is more fun than anything else. Well please send me my paper at this address that is shown above if you would do that for me. Will have to write more later because I am tired and going to hit the hay for the night.

Yours truly,

I worked at the Elwood Ordnance Plant before I joined the Navy and I like the Navy much better than the work I did before. So will close for now thanking you again for the paper.

Dear Mr. Semmler:

Just a few lines to let you know that I appreciate your sending me the Mokena News-Bulletin. It is something to look forward to each week. The boys in these camps really like to know what is going on back home.

My address has been changed. It is now as follows:

Thanks a million for sending me the old home town paper.

To cooperate with the Government's nation-wide campaign to save manpower, transportation, fuel and critical materials... you are asked by the War Production Board to

CONSERVE

... as a part of a voluntary program instituted by the War Production Board, the Office of Defense Transportation, the Petroleum Administration for War, the Solid Fuel Administration for War, the Office of War Utilities, and other governmental agencies.

THE War Production Board, through the Office of War Utilities, has requested the utility industry and the public to assist in a nation-wide effort to conserve critical resources, among them gas and electricity.

The specific measures for the conservation of gas, as recommended by the Office of War Utilities, are shown at the right.

A program for the conservation of electricity was announced last week.

We are asking all of our customers to cooperate with us in this program, and we will be pleased to assist them wherever possible to meet its objectives.

This Company is glad to do its part in this nation-wide plan of the War Production Board for the conservation of critical resources.

Gas has gone to war—don't waste it!

CONSERVATION MEASURES REQUESTED BY THE OFFICE OF WAR UTILITIES

In the Home

Conservation during heating season

Reducing your home temperature to 65° will save substantial amounts of gas. You should also set the temperature down to 55° at night and when you are away from home.

If you have a gas space heater with no thermostatic control, use it only when heat is actually needed in the room where it is located.

Reduce your use of gas for heating by thorough insulation, weather-stripping and installing storm windows. Don't heat unused rooms or your garage.

Your gas range should not be used for heating the room.

Year 'Round Conservation

Save gas in cooking by preparing whole meals in the gas oven or one-dish meals on a single top burner. Do not light the top burners until the cooking utensils are in place.

Use hot water from your gas water heater carefully. Avoid a continuous stream of hot water for washing hands, dishes or shaving. Leaky faucets waste more hot water than you think. They should be repaired.

Careful use of your gas refrigerator will save gas. Don't leave the door open. Cool cooked foods before placing them in the refrigerator.

In Commercial and Industrial Establishments

Commercial and industrial users of gas equipment should watch for opportunities to avoid waste of gas in their gas cooking and water heating equipment as well as other places where gas is used. Gas cooking equipment should be turned off when no longer needed. Wasteful use of hot water should be avoided.

When gas burners do not function efficiently, see that they are properly adjusted.

Gas can be saved where premises are gas heated, if temperature is reduced to 65° when in use and 55° when not in use.

This piece of poetry was sent to Mrs. Earl Strasberg from a friend of her son Roger:

"A Note from the Skies"
Most Mothers receive letters from their sons via the postman, and of course, it's always a lovely surprise.

But Mrs. Strasberg has the distinction of receiving a letter from her son Roger from the skies!
Yes siree! Out there in New Lenox, Illinois Folks in town heard a throbbing noise.

And lo and behold A handkerchief weighted from a plane was dropped with a message love-freighted
Ah me! To have a son who flies like the birds

And drops notes to his Mom with loving words!
Say "Hello to the Folks" the message told,

And "love" (a word to be written in gold!)
A plane flying low over Illinois, With Lieut. Strasberg and other boys A handkerchief flutters down from a son

To his dearest Mom and only one!

Henry M. Wriston, president of Brown University, has delivered his own ringing J'Accuse! against bureaucracy in words as measured, specific, analytical and formidable as those of Zola when he burst the conspiracy against Dreyfus wide open and awakened France to the corruptions within the army and the state. Dr. Wriston's blast is entitled Challenge to Freedom and has just been published by Harper & Bros.

"The time is ripe for the resurgence of faith in public opinion," says Dr. Wriston. "The world is sick of the brutalities of power politics. The people are weary of the arrogance of bureaucracy. They are tired to death of the multiplication of pronouncements and orders and the confusion of documents and reports. . . . Government must simplify its structure, shorten its proceedings, limit its regulations. The people must resist centralization with bitter determination."

Invasion and abrogation of the citizen's right to be left alone has been the primary aim and achievement of the New Deal, according to Dr. Wriston — an aim and achievement implemented by a vast bureaucracy, under the direction of an Executive who continually seeks to by-pass Congress, destroy the checks and balances established under the Constitution, arrogate unto himself functions properly the sphere of the judiciary and the legislature, invade the rights of the states and destroy the framework of democracy.

What Dr. Wriston calls the "termites of bureaucracy" are, he says, undermining the foundations of freedom and representative government. If the people do not rise up and demand a whitening down of at least half of the existing personnel of the present federal administrative agencies and call a halt to the creation of new such agencies our democracy is done for, our productive capacity will be ruined, our nation will be bankrupted, the war debt will never be liquidated, the Four Freedoms will become a hollow mockery and a Fascist dictatorship will rule over the ruins of an impoverished nation.

The New Deal, he says, has aggravated nearly every ill it set out to cure. The President's record is a constant series of broken promises. The New Deal set out to break up monopolies; it has progressed by driving small businesses out and concentrating production and distribution in the hands of fewer and bigger monopolies. ORLAND PARK

Bend, Oregon
Sept. 13, 1943

Hi Mr. Semmler:

Just a few lines to let you know that I've moved from the desert an I'm up in the Great Oregon Forests now.

It sure is different from the Arizona desert. The temperature is about 40 degrees during the day and drops to about 10 degrees at night. All you can see for miles around is large trees and snow covered mountains. A fellow sure can get a good night's sleep up here. We're getting good food now and plenty of it.

I also want to thank you for the Orland Herald which I've been receiving, an hope I continue receiving the paper.

My new address is: Pvt. Speed Miller, 36735117, Tr. B 6th Rcn. Sqdn. APO 304, care postmaster, Bend, Oregon, U. S. Army.

Yours forever,
Speed Miller, Bend, Ore.

The Devotional period was conducted by the President, Mrs. Thomas Cooper.

The first meeting of the year for the Orland Parent Teacher Association was held in the school library Thursday evening, Sept. 16 with a good attendance. The selection of a president which was deferred from last year, resulted in the unanimous election of Mrs. Sherman Knox to again head the Association. Mrs. Knox, who was President last year, and had also been President of the Association from 1934 to 1936, was prevailed upon to accept that office for the 4th time by the assurance of a 100 percent cooperation from the membership. The complete list of officers for the coming year is as follows: President, Mrs. Sherman Knox, vice president, Mrs. Earl Reish Sr., Secretary, Mrs. Clarence Kramer, and Treasurer Mrs. Lloyd Cowen. The chairmen of the various standing committees will be selected during the coming week by these officers.

The sum of $40.00 was voted to apply on the purchase of Silver for the new Home Economics Unit of the school.

Mr. T. Erwin Kelly, Supt. of schools of spoke at length on the school outlook and plans for the coming year and pointed out many ways in which the Parent Teacher Association could help in working out these plans. He presented the Association with a check covering the membership fees for the 14 members of the school faculties and staff and promised their complete cooperation with the work of the Association.

Miss Virginia Tabor, Miss Olive Neitz and Miss Marie Paprocki of the school faculty were introduced.

With the increased enrollment in the schools, and with the expanding program and the widening of the scope of the school's activities there is a need for an active, strong and enthusiastic body of parents and friends of the school to help make the plans of the school work out to their fullest measure.

This can be done by PTA working in conjunction with the school officials and school staff. Every parent of a child in the Orland Park School or in the High School should join the PTA and do their share in this laudable work.

Refreshments consisting of home made cakes and coffee were provided by Mesdames Knox, Reish Kramer, Cowan and Manning and served under the direction of Mrs. Gustie Hallinan.

Mrs. Ben Sayers entertained Sunday, Sept. 19 at a Buffet supper in her home on Wolf Road in honor of her grandson Mr. Owen Creer who will leave for induction into the army Sept. 22. The following were guests: Mr. and Mrs. Owen Creer and daughter Carol Ann, Mr. and Mrs. James Creer and son Arthur, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sayers, Mr. Gilbert Sayers, Mr. Edw. Sayers, Mr. and Mrs. John Sayers and daughter Margery, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sayers, Mr. and Mrs. Louis

The Mokena Oilers also demonstrated that they are continuing their powerful attack from last season as they took two games from the Smokers.

The Paperhangers won two games from the V-Eighters as the V-Eighters are still in what looks like a present slump which lasts much longer will find them holding the cellar position.

Open Campaign To Salvage Waste Paper

An urgent appeal to business men in the Chicago area to place their influence behind the national waste paper salvage drive was voiced by Walter P. Paepcke, president of the Container Corporation of America.

Faced with increasing demands for packing and shipping materials for the conduct of the war and supplying essential civilian needs, Mr. Paepcke points out that great quantities of containers carrying supplies to the armed forces abroad cannot be salvaged. Consequently, it is imperative, he says, that more waste paper must be saved or production will be seriously curtailed. There is definitely a serious waste paper shortage. Continuing, Mr. Paepcke said:

"The paperboard industry is the principal consumer of waste paper, from which a large proportion of its product is made in whole or in part. The paperboard industry and its associated fabricating plants produce a major part of the packages, containers and protective devices which make the transport of merchandise possible in our present day economy, whether for war or for essential civilian trade.

"The war cannot be conducted nor the civilian population supported without an adequate supply of freight cars, trucks and ships; neither can the war go on nor the civilian population be supplied without an adequate production of packing and shipping material."

"Of increasing concern to government officials, military agencies, and industrialists has been the growing shortage of paperboard containers and packages. The total demand this year is estimated at about 8 million tons, but at its present rate of operations the industry will be able to produce only about 7 1/2 million tons of product, and the situation seems to become more critical each week. This shortage has been caused by the increasing demands of our war industries coupled with a decreasing supply of raw materials, accentuated by the inability to salvage containers carrying supplies to the armed forces abroad.

"The growing shortage of waste paper may make it impossible to continue at present manufacturing schedules. Some mills operating seven days a week have had to curtail schedules to six or five days a week and in some cases appreciable shutdowns have been occasioned by lack of this primary raw material.

"A large part of these present difficulties may be overcome with the co-operation of industry and public. It is estimated that we salvage less than one-third of the waste paper consumed in the United States. A substantial part of the waste paper er that is now being destroyed can be salvaged and turned into the channels of trade. To this end an advertising program is being financed by a group of leading paperboard mills co-operating with the National Salvage Program of the War Production Board. It is believed that the public will respond generously to these appeals.

"Specifically, I urge the business men of the Chicago area to lend their support to this campaign in every possible way. Every commercial and industrial user of paper or paperboard products should make sure that all useful waste is finding its way into channels of salvage and trade. Every business man can add his individual weight to the consumer salvage program which will solicit the co-operation of every household, and encourage Schools, Boy Scouts, Churches and Organized Charities in their efforts to supplement the activities of the waste material dealers."

Here is a plain warning for you . . .

3rd WAR LOAN
Knox, Secretary of the Navy.

Buy More Bonds
Buying War Bonds to the point of temporary personal sacrifice is the most direct way you can comply with Secretary Knox's appeal.

"Temporary sacrifice" is the correct phrase because you are only lending your money when you buy War Bonds. This government which never has defaulted on an obligation will pay you back $4 for every $3 invested if you hold the bonds for 10 years.

The least you can do is to back the attack with War Bonds today. Buy extra Bonds above your normal Bond buying.

FOR VICTORY

IT REMAINED for a young, keen-eyed corporal from Montauk, deeply interested in the sport, as most of our servicemen are, to ask a rather baffling question.

We were talking about the big bond sales gathering from baseball's Hall of Fame at the Yankee Stadium.

"Could you tell me," he asked, "from this Hall-of-Fame group, which men you consider outstanding—I mean the top of the list in each position? We have a lot of arguments about this around the barracks. There must be a few who head the list."

This was a quick-order decision. We had to make it that way. And here it was:

Outfield — Cobb, Ruth and Speaker.

Infield — Honus Wagner.

Pitchers — Cy Young, Walter Johnson.

Here were just six names that popped out from what is sometimes known as the subconscious roundup of more than 40 years.

Here is the way these quick selections worked out:

Back of the bat we have Bill Dickey, Mickey Cochrane, Gabby Hartnett, Buck Ewing and Roger Bresnahan.

My vote here goes for Bill Dickey, but there can be an argument.

In the box we have Cy Young, Christy Mathewson, Grover Alexander, Walter Johnson, Lefty Grove.

At first we have Lou Gehrig, George Sisler, Bill Terry.

At second we have Nap Lajoie, Eddie Collins, Rogers Hornsby, Frank Frisch. A photo finish.

At short we have only one man—Honus Wagner.

At third we have Jimmy Collins, Pie Traynor, Art Devlin, and Bill Bradley.

In the outfield we have Cobb, Ruth, Speaker and Joe Jackson—with Joe DiMaggio coming on. Ted Williams, a great hitter, was not a great outfielder.

Back to Results

I would say the top man on the list was Honus Wagner—in the infield spot.

The flying Dutchman, a great shortstop, led his league in hitting year after year.

He was also a brilliant base runner. Shortly before he died John McGraw, who knew more than his share of baseball, rated Wagner as the greatest ballplayer of all time.

In the outfield you can't get away from Cobb, Ruth and Speaker—hitting, fielding and spirit.

Shoeless Joe Jackson was the greatest natural hitter of them all. But Jackson finished under a cloud.

It is almost impossible to split Lajoie, Collins and Hornsby. If I happened to be a manager I'd like to have any of these men around. Collins had the speed—the smartness. Lajoie and Hornsby had the hitting power.

Cy Young won 511 ball games, more than most men ever pitch.

He was the star of two leagues. Walter Johnson was the best pitcher I ever saw. I believe these are the two standouts.

Look over Johnson's strike-out, shut-out and earned-run record. There's the story.

The best all-around ballplayer I ever saw—outfield, infield, pitching and hitting—was Babe Ruth.

Ruth and Cobb—or Cobb and Ruth—are still the two greatest ballplayers the old game has ever known. Plus Hans Wagner.

Mathewson and Sockalexis

Our old college chum, Andy Oakley, told me "You made a mistake in naming your two greatest pitchers. I mean Cy Young and Walter Johnson."

"These two won close to 1,000 big league games," I suggested. "No one else was even close. What's your pick?"

"Christy Mathewson," Andy said. "He was the best and the smartest pitcher I ever saw in more than 40 years. I'll admit Matty never had as much stuff as Johnson had and he never had the incredible stamina of Cy Young. But he was the best."

"Who was the greatest ballplayer I left off?" I asked Andy.

"An Indian by the name of Sockalexis, who played with Cleveland. He could outpitch Cobb, Ruth, Speaker or Jackson. He had more speed than all of them."

War-time Sports Program

Most of those who believe that sport should either be eliminated or cut to small measure in war-time are out of the service.

Most of those who favor as good a program as possible are in the service.

I have talked with many servicemen, and I have yet to find a single entry who doesn't want sport to keep going, largely for his own interest in baseball, football or boxing, news of which comes through newspapers, radio and movies.

EVENTS of the past season have done little to cheer the days of Mel Ott, manager of the New York Giants.

For the first time in his career with the Giants, dating back to 1926, Ott is on the receiving end of an unkindly symphony of bleacherite boos and hisses.

"I don't blame them," he told reporters. "I shouldn't be out there. But what can I do? I've got nobody else."

Solidly in last position in the National league, the Giants are one of baseball's present-day tragedies. It isn't right that the veteran Ott should be forced to carry on in the outfield — he hasn't the physical stamina necessary for the job. The added headache of managing the Giants is too great a cross for an average mortal to bear.

Ott should be running the Giants from the bench, but he has absolutely no replacement and none is in sight. The team is without reserves, both outfield and infield.

Memories

This is no fitting reward for a man who, in former years, meant so much to Polo Grounds fans. It is hard to realize that when Ott started playing ball with the Giants in 1926, a large share of old timers were in their prime.

Ott has been around a long time. It was in 1926, Ott's starting year, that Frank Frisch was traded with Pitcher Johnny Ring to the St. Louis Cardinals for Second Baseman Rogers Hornsby. In 1926, Leo Durocher was with Atlanta in the Southern association, Jimmy Dykes was doing his daily chores in the Philadelphia infield.

That same year Gabby Hartnett was with the Cubs. His best years were ahead of him. In 1926 Babe Ruth knocked 47 home runs for the Yankees, hitting .372 for the season. Herb Pennock won his greatest number of victories for the Yankees with 23 games in the win column. Dazzy Vance still had several years to go with Brooklyn. It wasn't until February, 1933, that Vance was traded with Shortstop Gordon Slade to the Cardinals for Infielder Jake Flowers and Pitcher Owen Carroll.

It was November 2, 1926, that Ty Cobb was released by Detroit and signed with the Athletics three months later. John McGraw didn't know whether to play Bill Terry at first or in the outfield. And Terry had his 10 best hitting years ahead of him.

The Front Office

You get the idea. Ott has been around a long time. He has seen some of the best go over the hill.

Ott is no youngster. And he deserves a better fate.

To the Giants' front office must go much of the blame for the team's miserable standing. War has imposed many new demands upon all baseball clubs. Those who were equipped to meet those demands have been successful. The others haven't. Managers no longer have the power that once was theirs. The front office makes the player deals, builds the team. The Giants' front office is out of the running. Ott is not to blame.

The future looks none too bright for the once greatest ball club in New York. It takes a long time to rebuild.

Attendance at the Polo Grounds reportedly is off by more than a third. This compares unfavorably with a decline of 8 per cent throughout the National league and a decline of 6 per cent throughout the American league.

SPORTS SHORTS

Henry Armstrong's real name is Henry Jackson. His ring name was borrowed from a boyhood chum in St. Louis.

UNEXPENDED WAR FUNDS MUST BE WATCHED

THAT CONGRESS has fully provided funds for war purposes is demonstrated by the fact that of the money appropriated for expenditure up to July 1 of this year, 203 billion dollars had not been used but was still subject to the call of the administrative departments. It means the departments had in their hands a sum equivalent to an average of $1,561 for each man, woman and child in the nation. That is nearly twice the amount that has actually been expended for war purposes during the years of 1941, '42 and '43. From July 1, 1940, to July 1, 1941, expenditures for war purposes amounted to $6,301,043,165. For the next year, ending July 1, 1942, the expenditures amounted to $26,011,065,089, and for the last year, ending July 1, 1943, the total was $70,219,400,244.

In addition to the 203 billions of unexpended balances, congress has provided well over 100 billion for war purposes for the current fiscal year, ending July 1, 1944.

Senator Byrd is asking the "why" of these tremendous unexpended balances. He sees in them a danger to American institutions in placing so much, evidently unneeded money, in the hands of government departments. Congress could, and possibly may, recall such balances as have not been expended, or for which contracts have not been let. Congress has voted money like the proverbial drunken sailor. If it is not needed it would be well to relieve the taxpayers of as much of the war burden as is possible of saving. That $1,561 is quite a sum for each one of us to meet. That, plus the individual portion of the appropriations for this year, means an average of better than $2,500 for each man, woman and child, or a mortgage for each family of five of $12,500.

WISFUL THINKING WILL NOT WIN ELECTIONS

WISFUL THINKING does not win elections. Before the votes are counted the "outs" can wish themselves in and the "ins" can wish themselves in again. Even at this early date wishful thinking is being indulged in by candidates for nominations for every office up to that of President.

Listening in at occasional small gatherings of party workers or friends of some candidate reminded me of one man who did more than wishful thinking. Some two weeks before the election in which Governor Landon was defeated for the presidency, in company with a Chicago acquaintance, I paid a call on Jim Farley at Democratic headquarters in New York. My Chicago acquaintance was for Landon, was wearing a big Landon sunflower and in a wishful thinking way was confident of the governor's success. After I had introduced him to the Democratic chairman he expressed that confidence in general terms.

Jim Farley pulled a number of sheets of paper out of his desk, a sheet for each state, and taking them one at a time, he told my acquaintance just what would happen in each state. Landon would carry two states. That Farley knew was demonstrated two weeks later when the votes were counted. He knew. I do not know the details of how he knew but Jim Farley was not a political organizer who depended on wishful thinking to produce the results he desired.

POST WAR RELIEF AND UNCLE SAM
IT IS BEING PROPOSED in Washington that philanthropic Uncle Sam, representing 6 per cent of the world population, should carry the greater portion of the post war relief and reconstruction expense. To do so the 20 cents, or more, out of each dollar in his pay envelope, the worker is now paying as income taxes, will be heavily increased and the American standard of living must be reduced to that of European and Asiatic nations. It all sounds very nice as expressed in idealistic words but will the American workman stand for such a program as expressed in his dollars? That new car, to be purchased when the war ends, would be definitely out and it would be potato or cabbage soup, instead of a beefsteak, for his dinner. America should, and will, do its share but let us be practical about the doing.

WE CAN, IN TIME, pay off the war debt, large as it will be, by getting back to that adequate simplicity of government we enjoyed in the early years of this century.

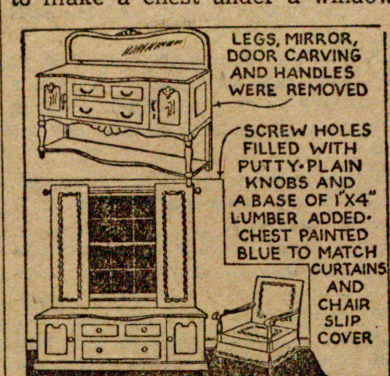

The cost in those years was well under a billion dollars a year and we had all the government we needed or wanted. We did not have, or know, the meaning of "bureaucrats."

WHEN THE DOCTOR comes some from the war he will find many people have recovered from the illness they thought they had.

Handy Chest Made From an Old Buffet

MANY young homemakers are gaily setting forth to buy junk furniture for remodeling. The first thing they learn is to consider each piece not for what it is but for what it may be. The 40-year-old buffet shown here was never beautiful in its youth and took itself too seriously in a heavy sort of way. It seemed to be waiting there in the junk yard for some young modern to make cheerful use of its sturdy materials.

The sketch shows how the main part of the buffet was remodeled to make a chest under a window in a combination sewing and guest room. A wood chisel is useful for removing carving that is glued on and either putty or plastic wood may be used for filling screw holes and other holes. If the piece is varnished, it is best to rub it down with sandpaper to remove the high gloss before painting. What became of the mirror and legs of this buffet is another story to appear soon.

NOTE—This sketch is from BOOK 7 of the series prepared for readers. Number seven also contains directions for more than 30 other things to make from odds and ends. A whatnot is made of spoons; orange crates become bedside stands; a wicker chair is padded and covered; rags turn into rugs and many other transformations take place with clear directions for you to follow step by step. "Well, Doc," said the patient, "you and I have been pals since college days, and I couldn't think of insulting you by offering you money. But I've remembered you in my will."

"That's mighty fine of you," said the doctor. "And by the way, let me see that prescription again, will you? There's a little correction I want to make."

In the Navy a floor is a "deck," doors are "bulkheads," downstairs is "below," and a cigarette is a "Camel." At least, Camel is the favorite cigarette among Navy men, as it is among men in the Army, Marines, and Coast Guard. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) And a carton of Camels is a favorite gift. Though there are now Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

If authorities prove to be correct, post-war tires may give 75,000 or more miles of service. Super-tough rayon, nylon or improved cotton carcass will help to make this mileage possible.

Army raincoats formerly containing 40 per cent crude rubber now are made almost entirely of synthetic resin and oil-treated material. Crude rubber content of boots and overshoes has been cut about 40 per cent.

A complete armored division on the road has 13,488 tires in use, not counting spares and reserve supplies.
